Dear Mr. Snow -

Providing ample water for all Californians must include policies which encourage conservation. None of CalFed's current alternatives adequately address conservation.

A major problem is that water is not efficiently used by agriculture which consumes about 85% of California's water. A sensible policy which raises water prices to farmers will encourage them to conserve.

I hope these thoughts are entered into the draft Programmatic Environmental Impact Report and Statement.

Sincerely,

Dr. James K. Seger
