United States Representative
Mr Wally Herger
Dear Sir

In the early thirties an Engineer (a Mr Rebber (I may have the name wrong) presented a plan to the public to install a set of locks at the Marin San Pablo entrance that would prevent salt water to enter the Delta region.

This would eventually convert San Pablo Bay into a fresh water area.

I do believe that if this plan was completed it would benefit the whole Delta area.

I am curious to know why this plan cannot be studied to-day.

When the Rebber plan was submitted for study the plan was blocked by the United states Army Engineers because the Mare Island navy ship yard was there and it would have blocked an quick entrance to the Golden Gate

I am passing my thought on to you for your opinion

Yours Truly

Paul [illegible]
