I am totally opposed to the moronic and costly solutions CALFED has on the table for the so-called Bay Delta restoration. The days of the Corps of Engineers paving everything in sight are over. There are many intelligent, low-cost solutions that have been totally ignored by your agency.

We do not have to spend billions on more studies.that would result in more billions to be spent on massive public works projects resulting in untold and unnecessary hardship on people and the environment.

Rather, spend a fraction of that money on restoration projects already identified in the Central Valley and require the farmers of the Central Valley to use water more efficiently and use water as a curb on further development in southern California.

Intelligence and not engineering is what is needed at CALFED.
