Comments:

1. Levee protection - The state and particularly the South water users should be responsible for much of the levee maintenance & stability - maintaining their water transport system & dams going into winter - our levees would not be so stressed & would require less expensive work. The high cost is partially because of winter storage for the South.

2. This community is very concerned with maintaining a lower level of water behind Oroville or Shasta dams, going into our wet season. We need additional storage - preferably to the South.

3. Raising Shasta Dam or increasing water storage may mean higher water levels in the rivers in spring. Trees along the levees will suffer from a high water table after they emerge from dormancy, killing them & orchards along the rivers do not want seepage increased in spring.
