Dear Mr. Snow,

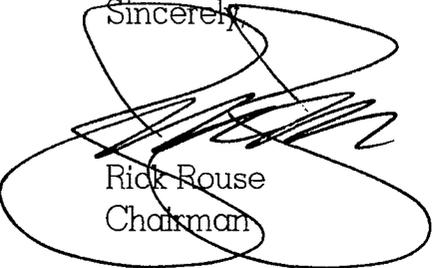

I just recently was informed about the study to extend Shasta Dam and increase the storage capacity of Shasta Lake.

Frankly, I don't understand the rationale for the project. The general mood in our country is to begin the process or removing dams, not adding new ones, or increasing existing ones.

My understanding of the implications of this will ruin and flood natural flowing sections of the McCloud River that now are one of the last and few places on this planet where wild trout exist. And, my understanding is that the McCloud also hosts numerous historical and archeological sites that would be buried forever with this proposal.

I, along with many, many other friends of the McCloud urge you to reexamine the environmental and public issues before taking any further action.

Sincerely,

Rick Rouse
