Comments:

With every gallon of water that is allowed to be sent south out of the Delta, the message should also be sent: this water is valuable, conserve it, use it well. Contracts for Delta water use should only be made with users who are willing to practice conservation such as planting crops that require low water use, using high-tech irrigation and engaging in water-conserving landscaping. (I am enclosing a waterwise plant list from Cornflower Farms of Elk Grove.) We should not even think about damaging our Delta by building a peripheral canal.
